

Online Classes Survey

Agency Name:

City of McKinney

Austin Lakes Hospital

City of Baytown

Lewisville Parks & Recreation Department

City of Wylie Parks and Recreation

City of Southlake Athletics

El Paso Parks and Recreation

City of Denton

Austin parks & recreation department

Johnson Park Youth Center

Galveston County Parks

City of Stephenville

City of Colleyville

Denton Senior Cneter

City of Fulshear

City of Bastrop

City of Grand Prairie

City of Friendswood

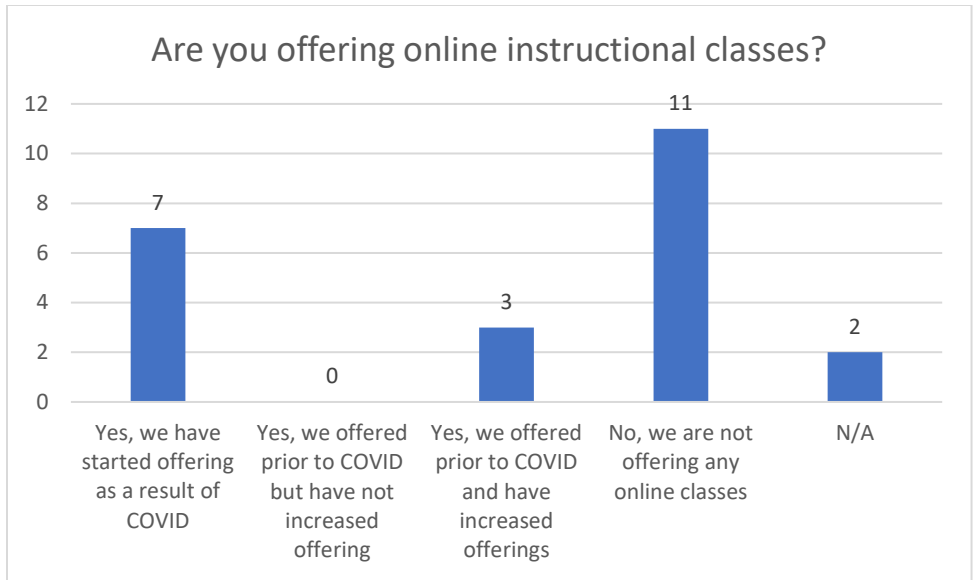

The Woodlands Township

City of Mineral Wells P.A.R.D.

City of Bay City

The Playwell Group

22 responses in 22 results

If you are offering (or plan to offer) online classes, what classes are you offering?

We were already in discussions and working on a online platform for our group exercise classes prior to COVID, but this pushed our timeline. We currently offering:

- Group Exercise
- Children/Parent Activities
- Story Time (library)
- Crafts (library)

N/A

We have not started classes that you register to attend yet. However we are offering online/social media videos with instruction.

We are offering fitness and craft classes.

looking to offer preschool athletics programming

- Zoom training for seniors
- Wellness Seminars
- Preschool Classes
- Stem Classes
- Karate
- Tennis and Golf Instruction

Line Dancing to enrolled members

Painting and Fitness classes along with fun activities.

Fitness classes, programs, e sports, etc.

Some of our fitness class instructors are able to teach online classes. Some are not able to due to the licensing restrictions of their specific certifications.

In my department - Environmental Services, we have not begun to offer any educational programs online (composting, vegetable gardening, water conservation). our staff does not teach the classes. We hire speakers and at this time are not set up to provide webinars through these external presenters to our community.

Not sure. Not planning to offer online classes unless social distancing lasts past the end of June.

Different aspects about parks and playgrounds. We do these through Playcore. I will forward the schedule to Megan so it can get distributed.

13 responses in 22 results

If you are offering (or plan to offer) online classes, how are participants registering?

No registration required, just log in and join. Future offerings, special events, may require and we will register with our recreation software

Via Zoom or Facebook Live Stream

If we go to online, paid classes we will have people register via Amilia (our registration software).

At this point, we are not registering or charging. We are posting them as a community service on our social media pages.

potentially activenet

Through our normal online registration process

through our recreation software

Currently, we are offering them for free (online and on Facebook) There is no registration. We are working to transition to paid classes soon.

TBD. Plans are pending.

There is no registration. At this time we are offering them to everyone who "likes" that City's Parks and Recreation Facebook Page.

Not planning to offer online classes unless social distancing lasts past the end of June.

Will forward schedule and registration to Megan

12 responses in 22 results

How and who are monitoring classes? How is attendance being tracked?

website visits - you tube visits

If we did we would use Zoom or FB. Zoom allows us to see how many individuals are logged in as does FB. We can also have RSVP to make sure that we can get an estimate.

Right now, attendance is not tracked.

We are analyzing the social media data to determine what people like and who is participating.

don't know yet. probably have instructor + moderator. moderator would track attendance/manage letting people into class.

Staff through zoom

instructors and registrants are given a zoom link.

It will be up to the Recreation Coordinator and the instructor to track attendance and monitor the class.

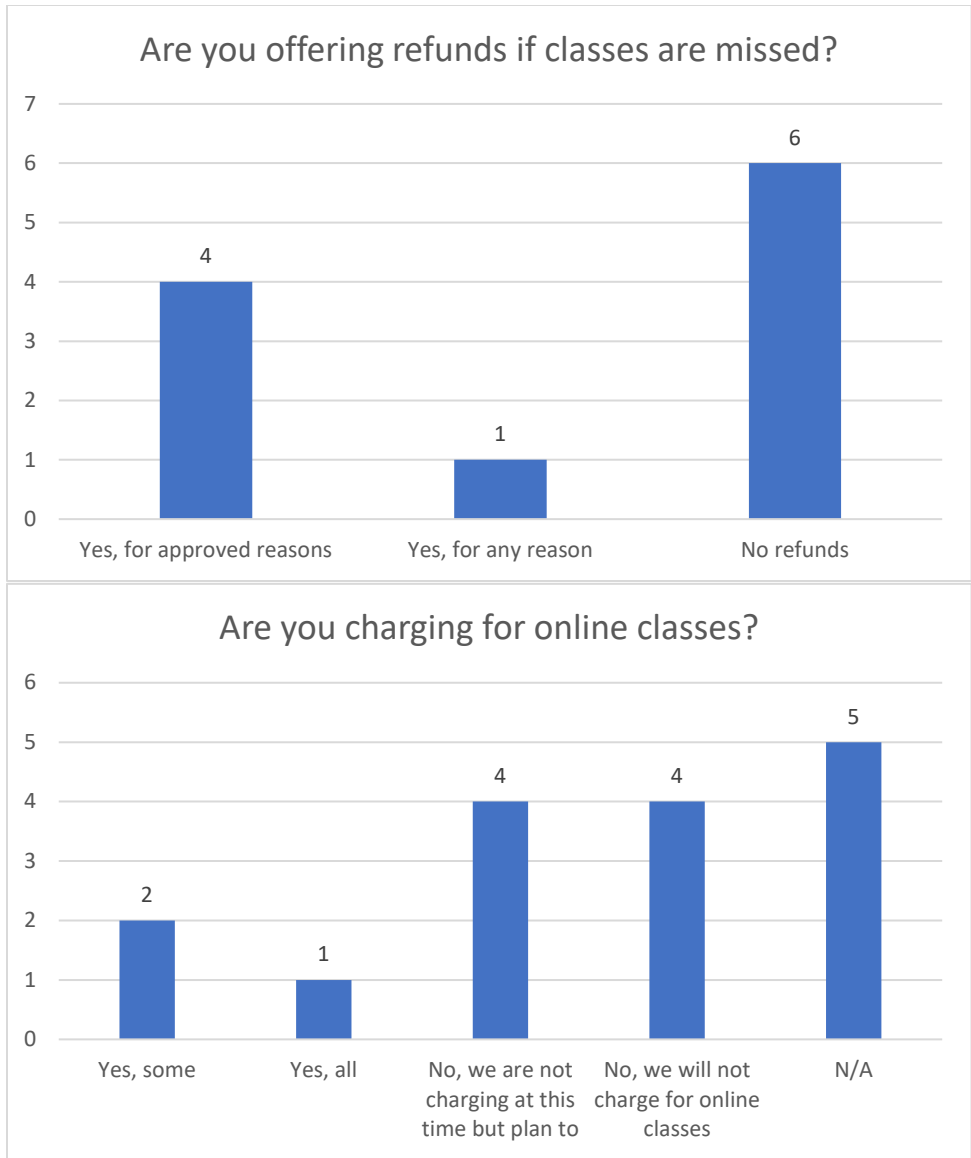

Via staff through Active Network reporting.

We are not worrying about attendance at this point but we check in on the live feeds periodically to see how many people are watching.

Not planning to offer online classes unless social distancing lasts past the end of June.

Tracked online ass these are done through Go To Meeting

12 responses in 22 results

How much are you charging (or do you plan to charge)?

In the future, some online will be included with recreation center memberships, and some will be paid through software registration and pass code provided, some will be free.

Charging/membership requirements will not be made until after COVID is over.

N/A

less than the class would be in person obviously, but haven't talked specifics.

Approved fee schedule

probably in the $10 to $20 range (as opposed to the $20 to $30 we did prior to COVID)

TBD. Plans are still pending.

After we are able to go back to regular classes, we are thinking of creating a closed group where people can pay $10 a month for online classes and records of the online classes. Our normal classes are on a punch card that does not expire.

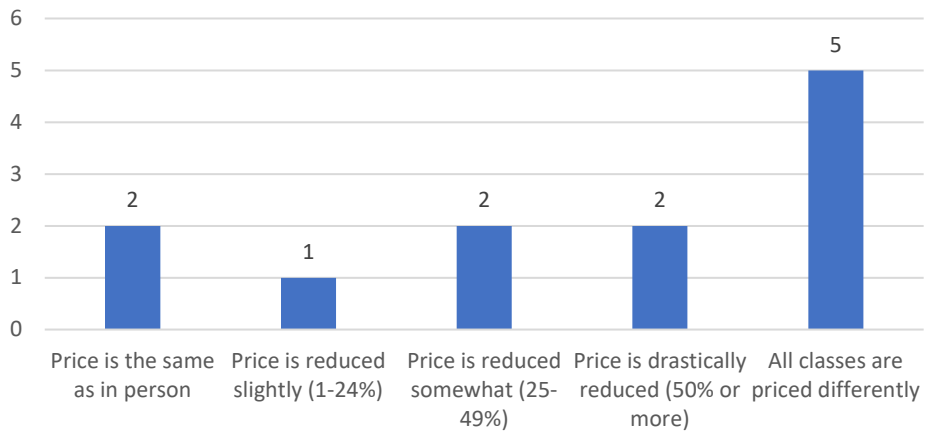

If we are able to provide online classes, there would be no cost. All of our educational programs are free.

Not sure.

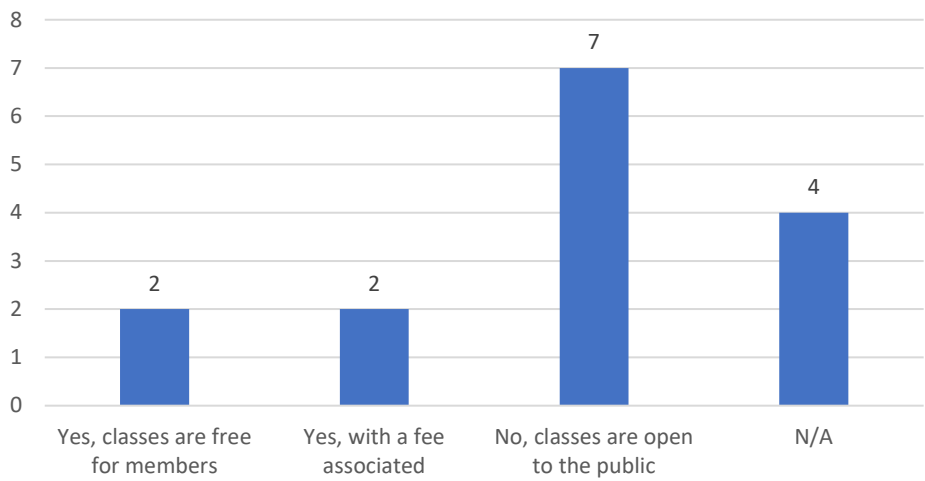

NA

10 responses in 22 results

How does this amount compare to your price if they were held in facility?

Are you offering classes as part of memberships?

What are your participation numbers in online classes?

Don't have those here with me - but happy to forward.

N/A

Fitness classes where the instructor has a large following like Zumba are getting a lot of traffic. We also post full length yoga and some boot camp. The craft classes are more like short demos. We have started discussing the need to get some full length sewing classes and possibly cooking classes, both with registration, online soon. These classes are popular in person and are well suited to home instruction.

haven't actually started - still in discussion phase

do not track right now. BUT we are assuming that it will be a lot lower.

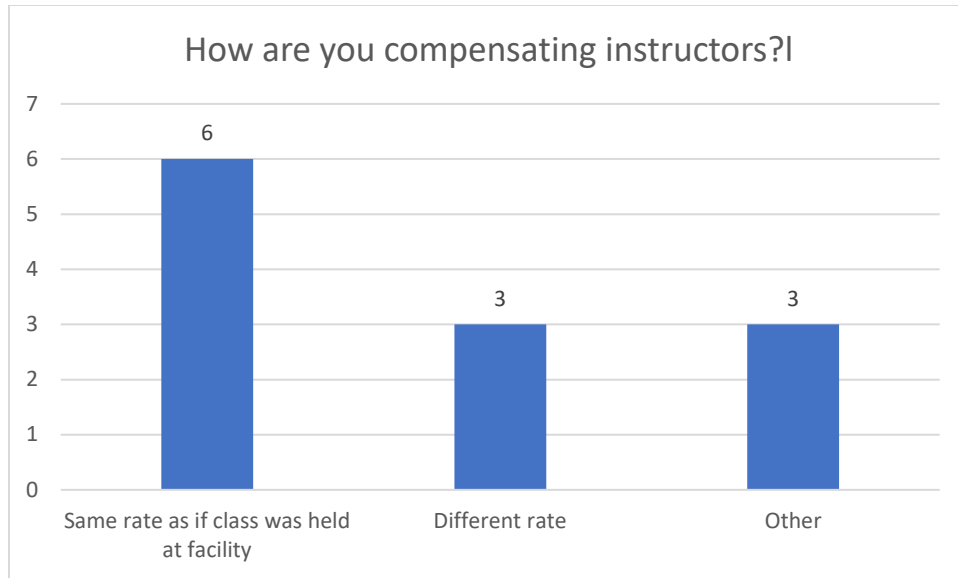

We usually see 4-10 people watching the entirety of the classes.

Zero, not offering yet.

Offered nation wide so there are hundreds of participants

8 responses in 22 results

How are you preventing instructors from offering classes independently through their own platform and "looping" you out?

Has not been an issue

We aren't. In fact this is the primary way that our citizens are still being active within our programming. Instructors are doing the classes on their own and most of the time we share on our social media.

We are monitoring social media. Most are our "friends" on social media platforms.

We have talked about it, but haven't addressed this, yet. There's nothing to stop them from doing that regardless of the stay-at-home orders and we anticipate that some may continue to do online classes after we open up. I imagine we will be addressing this in our contracts, outlining what is ok with us and what is not.

haven't actually started - still in discussion phase

Good question

we're not

Once we offer "their" class again, they will have to stop the independent classes.

If they also offer their own classes independently, we allow that. We can see if someone is sharing a video recorded on our facebook page. However, if they recorded a video of themselves and are sharing it, we feel that it is their prerogative.

N/A

These are Playcore and their affiliates employees

11 responses in 22 results

Additional comments

Currently all online classes are free. Once we pass COVID and centers are open, some classes may have a fee or require membership for access.

I am sorry I do not have the numbers here this evening - but will be happy to send later this week.

Parks & Recreation has not come up with a plan to execute virtually yet. It is still in the planning stages.

Our normal classes are on a 16 class punch card that doesn't expire which is why we are not offering any sort of discount for the lack of classes at this time. They can continue to use those punches once classes start again.

Anyone is welcome

4 responses in 22 results